*We do not simply exist within existence,
but all of existence exists within us.*

~ Adyashanti

Everything Under the Sun

BY ADYASHANTI

Look around you; there is only one reality. The reason that you are here, wherever here is for you, is because it is the only place that you can be right now. But even though reality is right here, and even though there is quite literally nothing but reality, it is very possible for you to miss it altogether. By miss it I mean to imagine that reality is something or somewhere other than here. As strange as it may sound it is very possible, even probable, that even though you have eyes to see, you do not see. And even though you have ears to hear, you do not hear. What you see and hear is not exactly what is actually here, but what you imagine is here.

Our imagination is a very powerful force in determining what we perceive. If we imagine that the world is teeming with evil forces, we will surely perceive the world as evil. But if we imagine the world to be essentially good, we will perceive it as good. Either way it is the same world that we are looking at. But the world is neither good nor bad in and of itself; it is simply what it is. And if we see the world as either good or bad, we will not be able to see it as it actually is. We will only be able to see it as we imagine it to be.

Now take this idea and apply it to everything and everyone in your life. Try it for a moment, or an hour, or a day. And if you do, you may begin to notice that the world you imagine to exist does not exist at all. This may cause you some fear, or possibly the thrill of discovery, but either way the important thing is to get some distance from the habitual way the mind contorts and creates perception.

But even though our mind imagines the world and everything in it to be other than the way it actually is, the reality of existence remains eternally untouched by our misperception of it. This is both relatively good and bad. It is good in that existence is eternally what it is. We need not worry about reality becoming something other than reality. But it is bad in the sense that the world we imagine to exist is always colliding with the world as it actually is. This collision is the cause of immense human suffering and conflict.

So we are trapped within our illusions and misperceptions. And the greatest illusion of all is to believe that we are not trapped. But even when we realize that we are confined within a prison of our own making, we are trapped because all the ways we struggle to get out of our illusions are illusions themselves. So, yes, we are trapped, and helpless to boot.

But there is a very strange thing that can occur at exactly the point where you realize that there is no escaping the imaginary world of your illusions. You bare your heart open to illusion, surrender your eternal struggle against it, and admit to being bound by its cunning imagination. I don't mean that you become despondent or resigned to your fate. I mean that you truly let go in the face of your utter defeat and stop struggling.

And when all the struggle ceases, we realize that the prison of our mind cannot hold us in anymore, because the prison was all along something we imagined into existence. And imagined things aren't real, they don't exist. But we could never really see this as long as we were fighting the phantoms of our minds. We needed the one thing that our imaginary minds could not bring about, could not fake or create: the genuine surrender of all struggle.

In the blink of an eye, we are no longer confined within illusion nor our attempt to avoid illusion. When all struggle ceases, there is nothing to bind us to a distorted perception of existence and we can finally see. What we see is that we do not simply exist within existence, but all of existence exists within us as well. And although everywhere we look we see the endless diversity of life, we also now see our own true face in everything under the sun. ▸

Our imagination is a very powerful force in determining what we perceive.

San Francisco Bay Area Intensives

Fierce Grace

Awakening in the Midst of Turmoil

Join Adyashanti for an extended time of satsang, silence, and inquiry into the nature of your being. This weekend will be an exploration of what it means to awaken in the midst of life's fierce grace:

There are many fierce moments in any one life span: times of turmoil, upheaval, challenge, and change. These fierce moments of grace are in many ways the most spiritually important moments of our lives, because they call to us to awaken from our old patterns of conditioned existence and embrace the insecurity of living life from a place beyond our habitual fears and conditioned responses. Life calls each one of us to find a way, both personally and collectively, to allow life's fierce grace to open our hearts and minds to a new state of consciousness from which to act and relate to the world within us.

Special Events

Omega Institute

New York, NY

The Inner Revolution of Spiritual Awakening Sunday, April 17, 2011, 7pm–9:30pm

Cost: $49

Spiritual awakening opens the door to a life beyond ego, a life lived directly from spirit rather than from the mind. In order to live this way we must stand alone—not as an island or a defense, isolated within the structure of ideology, but as a free being. We must step completely out of the known, out of every conceptual box, every container that humanity has ever created, so that the freshness of spirit can flower ever new and free. ~ Adyashanti

Location: Manhattan Center Studios, 311 West 34th Street, New York, NY

Registration: Visit Omega Institute's website, www.eomega.org, for more information.

Spirit Rock Meditation Center

Woodacre, CA

Where Is the Buddha?

Saturday, October 8, 2011, 11am–6pm

Cost: $90–$150 sliding scale

It is easy to imagine that the Buddha, the awakened one, is something or somewhere other than here. It is also easy to imagine that awakening to reality will happen sometime other than now. But it will not, it cannot. As long as we continue to think in terms of time we will deceive ourselves. You may have noticed that your ego always needs more time. It is always in a state of becoming. Tomorrow is the ego's best friend. But the moment that you are willing to step outside of tomorrow, outside of needing more time, or having more time, everything becomes possible. And you may finally notice where the Buddha has always been. ~ Adyashanti

Join Adyashanti for an exploration of this timeless teaching. This event is a benefit for Open Gate Sangha and Spirit Rock Meditation Center. Please bring a bag lunch and carpool to this event.

Location: Spirit Rock Meditation Center, Woodacre, CA

Registration: Register through Spirit Rock at www.spiritrock.org.

Unity of Tustin

Tustin, CA

Jesus: The Inner Teachings of a Revolutionary Mystic Saturday, December 10, 2011, noon–6pm

Cost: $50 event fee before 5pm December 9; $75 at the door.

Jesus was no ordinary mystic. He was a spiritual revolutionary of the highest order. Over the centuries Jesus' life and his teachings have been so watered down and misinterpreted that much of the true power of his message goes unnoticed today. But the transformative power of his teaching is still there in plain sight for anyone who has the willingness to see it. I invite you into an exploration of the spiritual teachings of Jesus—a revolutionary mystic.

~ Adyashanti

Location: Unity of Tustin, 14402 S. Prospect Ave., Tustin, CA

Silent Retreats

About Retreats

Silent retreats are for those who desire to deeply realize the truth of their being and the essence of existence. Retreats offer time to step back from the course of daily life and enter into the unknown, in an environment that provides both structure and support. To serve this intention, all retreats are held in deep silence, except for time together in satsang. In addition to satsang, the daily schedule includes several periods of meditation. Both forums are suited to penetrating heartfelt questions and discovering the liberating truth of one's being.

Falling into Grace

Book Excerpt

Standing in Your Own Two Shoes

The real search isn't a search into tomorrow, or to anywhere other than now. It's starting to look into the very nature of this moment. In order to do that, you have to "stand in your own two shoes," as my teacher used to say. What she meant by "standing in your own two shoes" is you have to look clearly into your own experience. Stop trying to have someone else's experience. Stop chasing freedom or happiness, or even spiritual enlightenment. Stand in your own shoes, and examine closely: What's happening right here and right now? Is it possible to let go of trying to make anything happen? Even in this moment, there may be some suffering, there may be some unhappiness, but even if there is, is it possible to no longer push against it, to try to get rid of it, to try to get somewhere else?

I understand that our instinct is to move away from what's not comfortable, to try to get somewhere better, but as my teacher used to say, "You need to take the backward step, not the forward step." The forward step is always moving ahead, always trying to attain what you want, whether it's a material possession or inner peace. The forward step is very familiar: seeking and more seeking, striving and more striving, always looking for peace, always looking for happiness, looking for love. To take the backward step means to just turn around, reverse the whole process of looking for satisfaction on the outside, and look at precisely the place where you are standing. See if what you are looking for isn't already present in your experience.

So, again, to lay the groundwork for awakening, we must first let go of struggling. You let go by acknowledging that the end of struggle is actually present in your experience now. The end of struggle is peace. Even if your ego is struggling, even if you're trying to figure this out and "do it right," if you really look, you might just see that struggle is happening within a greater context of peace, within an inner stillness. But if you try to make stillness happen, you'll miss it. If you try to make peace happen, you'll miss it. This is more like a process of recognition, giving recognition to a stillness that is naturally present.

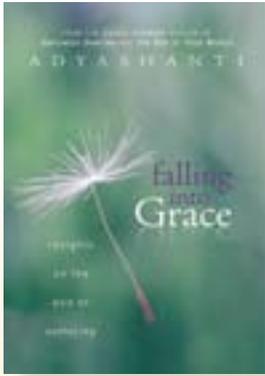

We're not bringing struggle to an end. We're not trying to not struggle anymore. We're just noticing that there is a whole other dimension to consciousness that, in this very moment, isn't struggling, isn't resentful, isn't trying to get somewhere. You can literally feel it in your body. You can't think your way to not struggling. There isn't a three-point plan of how not to struggle. It's really a one-point plan: Notice that the peace, this end of struggling, is actually already present.

The process is therefore one of recognition. We recognize that there is peace now, even if your mind is confused. You may see that even when you touch upon peace now, the mind is so conditioned to move away from it that it will try to argue with the basic fact of peace's existence within you: "I can't be at peace yet because I have to do this, or that, or this question hasn't been answered, or that question hasn't been answered, or so-and-so hasn't apologized to me." There are all sorts of ways that the egoic mind can insist that something needs to happen, something needs to change, in order for you to be at peace. But this is part of the dream of the mind. We're all taught that something needs to change for us to experience true peace and freedom.

Just imagine for a moment that this isn't true. Even though you may believe that it's true, just imagine for a moment: What would it be like if you didn't need to struggle, if you didn't need to make an effort to find peace and happiness? What would that feel like now? And just take a moment to be quiet and see if peace or stillness is with you in this moment.

In the same way that we fall into the arms of a loved one or drop our heads on the pillow at night, we can surrender into the beauty and truth of who and what we really are. In his first introductory book, Falling into Grace, Adyashanti invites us to let go of our struggles with life and open to the full promise of spiritual awakening: the end of delusion and the discovery of our essential being. Adyashanti has found that the simpler the teaching, the greater its power to change our lives. In this book he shares what he considers fundamental insights that will “spark a revolution in the way we perceive life.”

More and more people are “waking up” spiritually. And for most of them, the question becomes: now what? The End of Your World is Adyashanti’s response to a growing need for direction on the spiritual path. With straight talk and penetrating insight, he describes the “I got it / I lost it” phenomenon—the fluctuation between what he calls “non-abiding” awakening and the ultimate state of “abiding” enlightenment. He also points out the pitfalls and cul-de-sacs that “un-enlighten” us along the journey. Adapted from the 6-CD album.

Topics include the ground of being, qualities of our fundamental nature, knowing vs. being who we are, the meaning of nirvana, being stuck in emptiness, and leaning into life.
